Cloud Migration Case Study

About Martineau King PLLC

Martineau King PLLC is a defense litigation firm located in Charlotte, North Carolina. Two of the firm's core application suites are legacy with no SaaS offerings and backups were stored on a local appliance. Utilizing EC2, applications were migrated to the cloud with licensing and complete functionality intact. Backups are now highly durable and provide significantly lower recovery point and recovery time objectives. All while saving money compared to previous solution.

THE CHALLENGE

Customer relies on two legacy applications that are mission critical and difficult to support. Server failures and network outages lead to costly downtime. A site-wide disaster could lead to a total loss of proprietary data and a recovery time that far exceeds acceptable objectives. Customer personnel are becoming more and more distributed. Legacy applications and proprietary data need to be securely available from anywhere.

THE SOLUTION

A full AWS cloud migration addresses all of the customer's pain points. Line-of-business applications are moved to current hardware and supported operating systems without capital outlay. Security controls are tightened while remote access becomes easier and more robust. RTO and RPO times are both reduced when compared to the previous solution.

THE BENEFITS

Robust Access

Members of the firm have greater flexibility and security accessing sensitive data outside of the office.

Highly Durable and Available

Leveraging multiple EC2 instances in different availability zones removes any single point of failure.

Reduced Expenses

All of these benefits come at a cost savings over the previous, traditional environment.
