

SafeHouse Outreach strives to help Atlanta's homeless population transition to stable, independent living. For a nonprofit, a hand-out isn't an answer; instead, a hand-up, which allows for sustainable, long-term change is. And when SafeHouse signed on with Onepath, we had a similar goal in mind. Rather than leave SafeHouse with a bandage solution, we provided the tools, knowledge, and support to bolster their mission of helping others.

When SafeHouse first reached out to Onepath, they were looking for easier administration and better pricing on Office 365. Additionally, they wanted to move their organization to the cloud, thereby increasing security and optimizing collaboration. Onepath prioritized this transition, and we ensured that the process was smooth and easy. As a result, SafeHouse was able to more easily access their data outside the office, improve their speed, and increase their overall productivity.

Funds are always scarce for any nonprofit, and Onepath was determined to optimize SafeHouse Outreach's IT spend. We began by leveraging their nonprofit status for better pricing and then redirecting those saved dollars from email to actual services. In this manner, we were better able to control the company's costs and produce a much smoother work environment. Additionally, we further reduced costs by eliminating unnecessary infrastructure. These funds could then be reallocated to other organizational services supporting their overall mission.

We knew the cloud was the next step for us, but we were worried about how long transitioning would take and what it would cost us. Fortunately, Onepath made the process simple and straightforward. Now, we're using safer, quicker tech, which helps us better reach day-to-day goals. Plus, we've increased what we're able to do for Atlanta's homeless population while simultaneously cutting down on the price."
